Summary of Information

Site involves a cluster of structures of greatly varying sizes and shapes in a relatively open and austere landscape setting. There are hills apparent in the middle distance. One structure is circular and domed, with a roof composed of equal-sided segments. There is another structure nearby that is taller than it is wide, perhaps even cylindrical, with a pattern going up the side. There are other structures present, of more conventional rectangular or oblong shape. There is a sense of association between all these structures—an interconnectedness of an intangible sort, as if each structure housed on particular sub-aspect of the overall purpose of the grouping of buildings.

The shapes and sizes of the structures were determined not by aesthetics but by the function or overall purpose of each structure. There seemed to be an object associated with the site, which was rounded, smooth, integrated, connected, with a bulbous portion and other elements that had flat surfaces, corners, and angles. Portions of the object were moveable and adjustable. The object seems to sit on the ground; it does not seem to be self-mobile, but can be moved from one place to another as required. It can also be adjusted from the vertical to the diagonal to the horizontal as required, but the base remains stationary. There is a pale ordinance-green color, which contribute to the impression that the site is military ordinance related, with a further impression that electromagnetics play a major role, and that the object may not directly be a weapon--in fact, it reminds one of the radome of the SGT York air defense weapon. There are attachments and accouterments on the sides of the object, as well as long line or corrugations in the sides of it.

Six objects sits on ground. Is not self mobile. Is not intended for its aesthetics - form follows function. Can be adjusted from vertical to diagonal to horizontal as required but base remains stationary. Impression of smooth-shiny ordnance green color (dull green); impression of military ordnance related, but feels of electroacoustics involved - i.e. not directly a weapon.
